

I heartily applaud the FCC "Localism" campaign and firmly believe national/regional services such as "K-Love" utterly fail to provide any public service of real value.

Terrestrial broadcast radio, a medium incredibly inspiring as a consequence of its "intangibility," must be protected from obsolescence. National programmers such as K-Love and Clear Channel are all about profit and nothing about quality programming.

Those of us who understand the power and value of local radio look to the F.C.C. to carry out its duty to protect this wonderful medium from becoming just another mundane, mediocre corporate franchise.

Please deny K-Love the use of the 89.9 transmitter in Georgetown, Kentucky.
